
ABSTRACT

B1
The invention relates to a microscope, in particular a confocal microscope, designed to measure an object from several angular positions while avoiding any rotation of the object to be measured. The microscope has an optical device for rotation of the image to be positioned in the ray path of the microscope.
